

Renew spirit at Olympics

It was the 1984 Summer Olympics. Mary Decker-Slaney, favored to win the 3,000-meter track race, was poised and ready to run. She had dedicated her life to excelling at running. Rounding a turn during the race, Slaney was tripped by the barefooted-South African Zola Budd. Whether or not the trip was intentional, Slaney was out of the race. But not for long. She is back again this year, determined as ever. She has renewed faith in herself to keep on going despite the odds.

In 1980, the U.S. hockey team, although each member was very different and the team was not expected to do so well, achieved one of America's greatest Olympic moments when it beat the Russian team and brought home the gold medal.

And the spunky and much-publicized Mary Lou Retton literally won the hearts of her fellow Americans by scoring perfect 10s in gymnastics.

At the 1988 Olympics will be 15 BYU alumni, plus other Utahns showing their best.

It is at these moments we feel the pride, the dedication and the will to succeed shining through these athletes. As amateurs, they have battled odds we can hardly imagine. They perform for themselves, their families and their country.

As we watch the Olympics, as we read the stories of their trials and triumphs, we hope we can be inspired to excel in our own areas of interest. We hope we can do our best — at BYU, with our families, in our future jobs, and at serving our fellowmen.

Watch the Olympics with that spirit in mind. Renew your goals of excellence. Remember we can't win everything, but the knowledge gained along the way will prove to be an invaluable tool.

The Olympics unite countries, cross political boundaries. We all share common goals, no matter what our governments say. Isn't it ironic that the event that should ignore politics has been used as a tool to further political causes? Boycotts have ruined many chances for athletes to succeed just to further selfish national pride.

We all want to succeed in life, and the Olympics is a good example for us to keep trying.

But as grateful as we are to the networks for showing us these competitions, we ask that they show us great athletes worldwide. Records are often broken by athletes from other countries. These athletes are just as gifted and dedicated as the Americans. Often the networks are so caught up in showing us every American that they bypass others who have achieved greatness. And while we love and appreciate our fellow Americans, we would like to see the others and their progress.

Show 'em

Dear Editor:

In response to Keith Hall's "Patella problem" I think the only one with a general education problem is someone from Vernal, Utah, who thinks that one of the University's biggest scandals is seeing some girl's kneecaps in the Cougar Eats. Keith, perhaps you ought to try a good course in Communication 401. It's much more fun to show the offenders where their knees are rather than wasting space in the editor's column.

Risky business

Dear Editor:

In Thursday's issue of The Daily Universe, we were interested to see an ad for a local, parachuting dropzone — offering first-jump courses to BYU students. We would like to stress the importance of realizing the various options open to anyone interested in making their first jump. There are currently four different parachuting centers in Utah and without a doubt, all four centers will boast of having the best, safest and most updated course for first-jump students. Regardless of the degree of safety, there are certain risks associated with the sport of skydiving. The general attitude of every dropzone's management and skydivers, along with aircraft and equipment conditions, instructor/jump-master qualifications and past safety records, are all influential in the degree of safety at various parachuting centers.

Unfortunately, the first-jump student from BYU is usually unaware of these facts and must accept whichever parachuting center he or she has chosen as the "right" place to jump.

The BYU Skydiving Club has existed for the last twenty years and is not affiliated with any of the four dropzones in Utah and is therefore able to give an unbiased opinion about these various dropzones — specifically their different teaching methods for first-jump courses and their wide ranging prices. We strongly urge any BYU student who is even slightly interested in making their first jump to first spend 45 minutes attending one of the BYU Skydiving Club meetings — every Thursday at 7 p.m. in 365 ELWC. Come watch a couple films or just talk to a few of the BYU skydivers as they pack their rigs. We're sure you'll go away feeling more informed about the sport of skydiving.

Ankle annoyance

Dear Editor:

We would like to respond to Keith Hall's derogatory article regarding the females on this campus. If all are missing, and what is left is just a sorry emotional poke at a candidate trying to become president of the United States (and perhaps can) by a cartoonist who is trying to be funny (but can't).

No nonsense, please

Dear Editor:

Someone on The Daily Universe staff is masquerading as a political cartoonist. The cartoon in Wednesday's issue which characterizes George Bush as a monkey is completely without taste or meaning, and moreover is offensive.

On the same page the Benson cartoon takes a sharp jab at Dukakis, but there is a point to the cartoon and it carries a meaningful message in good taste. What contrast. I tried in vain to find a serious message in the Mika cartoon, but there is none. All I could tease out of it was: (1) George Bush is running for president. Hardly news. (2) There is a comic book about Curious George. Wow. (3) George Bush is somehow related to or operates on the level of Curious George. What nonsense.

Where, oh where, is the political message? Where is the quick jab which sharply outlines in some clever way a relevant personal characteristic or political stand of the candidate? All are missing, and what is left is just a sorry emotional poke at a candidate trying to become president of the United States (and perhaps can) by a cartoonist who is trying to be funny (but can't).

Snow in Yellowstone helps firefighters

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Snow dusted parts of Yellowstone National Park on Sunday, giving firefighters a break in their battle against forest fires, and employees evacuated from park headquarters began returning.

Federal officials said they would double the number of soldiers sent to battle the fires that have charred nearly half the 2.2 million-acre park.

After months of drought and heat, temperatures were expected to reach only the mid-50s Sunday with humidity as high as 90 percent. Some sections of the park were dampened by light showers Saturday.

"The colder temperatures are going to raise the humidity and with the higher humidity, the wood will absorb some of that moisture. It'll be less likely to burn, although the fire shouldn't have much trouble," said Joe Halliday, chief naturalist for the west district of Yellowstone.

Winds were expected to stay in a more manageable range of 15 to 30 mph, well below the gusts above 50 mph that had driven the flames the previous two days.

Fires have charred more than 900,000 acres of Yellowstone since June in what firefighters call the worst fire season in the West in 30 years.

According to Brian Smith of the Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo., the smoke is drifting eastward but it isn't expected to pose any health problems.

Haiti churchgoers killed by armed men

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Men armed with guns and machetes burst into the church of a militant Roman Catholic priest Sunday and killed at least three parishioners, wounded 60 and burned down the building, witnesses and news reports said.

Police stood near the church but none came to the rescue, witnesses said. After the attack, gangs of men roamed the streets and stoned the offices of two groups opposed to the military regime of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

The Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, an outspoken opponent of the military government, had just begun a 9 a.m. (EDT) Mass when a group of men began throwing rocks at the church, panicking hundreds inside who rushed for the doors, said a foreign journalist attending the service.

The journalist, who contacted The Associated Press in New York by telephone, said, 20 to 30 men armed with machetes, sticks and guns came through the back doors of the church. They started shooting, beating, stabbing and slashing the parishioners, including a pregnant woman, he said.

Dukakis works on image improvement

Michael Dukakis, criticized for failing to spell out clearly his defense policy, conferred with Democratic congressional leaders Sunday on an offensive to improve his image. Running mate Lloyd Bentsen accused Republican George Bush of "kowtowing to the hard right" in his choice for vice president.

While the Democratic ticket tended to campaign duties, Bush and his running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, spent a quiet day together, gathering their families for an informal lunch at the vice president's residence in Washington.

Bush planned to resume campaigning on Monday when he travels to New Jersey and Illinois. Quayle scheduled appearances in Michigan and Wisconsin.

Dukakis, who has taken a more aggressive stance in recent days, spoke with congressional leaders in Boston about his image on national security and foreign policy issues and promised to "restate my positions forcefully" this week.

The Democratic presidential nominee criticized President Reagan for his veto of a defense authorization bill that had bipartisan support, and faulted the administration for its handling of the defense procurement scandal.

Poison gas used by Iraq raises concerns

WASHINGTON — Iraq's use of poison gas against its Kurdish minority is prompting concern that other nations bogged down in armed conflict might resort to the "silent killer" in violation of a universally accepted ban on use of chemical weapons.

According to U.S. officials, there is little question that Iraq's use of mustard gas against Iranian forces influenced Iran's decision to end their eight-year old Persian Gulf war last month.

Almost immediately after the cease-fire took effect, Iraq launched an offensive against its Kurdish minority as suspected collaborators with Iran. Tens of thousands of Kurds were forced to flee into southern Turkey.

Last week, about nine days after the first reports of Iraqi chemical warfare began to circulate, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said he was convinced the allegations were true.

Shultz accused the Iraqis of "unjustifiable and abhorrent" behavior. The Senate then unanimously approved stringent economic sanctions against Iraq.

New York professor to discuss writers

Alfred Kazin, a professor of English at the City University of New York Graduate School and University Center, will speak at a BYU Forum assembly Tuesday in the Marriott Center.

Kazin will discuss "'The Almighty Has His Own Purposes': God and the American Writer."

According to Kazin, the most vital American writers at the end of the 20th century seem to speak of God in mournful, plaintive, yet clearly aspiring tones.

Kazin will focus his address on two great writers of the 19th century, Herman Melville and Abraham Lincoln.

A question-and-answer session with Kazin will be held directly after the forum at noon in the Varsity Theatre.

His visit coincides with the Third National Willa Cather Symposium which will be Sept. 14-17 at BYU.

Multi-party elections approved in Burma

Associated Press

RANGOON, Burma — Parliament on Sunday yielded to weeks of massive nationwide protests and approved holding the first multiparty elections since 1960.

The legislature appointed a group of elders to supervise the polling and set a target date for about three months from Saturday, when President Maung Maung announced the ruling Burma Socialist Program Party would relinquish its 26-year monopoly on power.

Despite government concessions, opposition leaders continued to press for an interim government to cope with Burma's growing chaos, and demonstrations continued in the capital.

Maung Maung issued a stern warning to demonstrators, who have taken to the streets by the millions since spring in their fight for democracy.

"People are now fed up with this lawlessness and are expecting the government to take effective action, Maung Maung said.

"I therefore warn those responsible for the lawlessness to cease such activities."

In some areas of Burma, he said, students and Buddhist monks were setting up rival local governments, creating "a grave and dangerous situation for those responsible."

He called on demonstrators to get back to work and on civil servants to reactivate the stalled machinery of government.

In addition, he attacked the recent formation of a rival government by former Prime Minister U Nu.

Maung Maung called Sunday's decision "a milestone in Burmese history."

"It will be evident in 20 years' time whether the decision was correct or not," he told the 489-member Parliament.

While authorizing elections in about three months, Parliament also held out the possibility that they could be postponed or held as early as November.

Parliament empowered the Council of State, the highest government organ, to change the Constitution to permit a multiparty system, enlarge the elections commission if necessary and formulate election rules.

Named to the Elections Supervision Commission were three retired civil servants, a retired army brigadier general and a former member of Parliament.

The men, all over 70, are generally regarded as neutral, although not especially prominent.

At least four are not members of the ruling party.

The Parliament session was held under tight security, and delegates slept in the building Saturday night. The area was cordoned off with barbed-wire fences and roadblocks manned by troops.

The multiparty elections would be the first in Burma since Feb. 6, 1960, when U Nu's Clean Anti-Facist People's Freedom League won a massive victory over an army-backed party.

U Nu was overthrown by the military on March 2, 1962. The coup, led by Gen. Ne Win, ushered in rigid one-party rule.

Maung Maung urged Burma's 22 million voters to "use their potent weapon — the vote — to choose the right representatives."

The Western-trained lawyer and author, the country's first civilian leader in 26 years, said he would not run in the elections and the powerful military "will not lobby for any party in the general elections."

Medals expected for American athletes

'88 Summer Olympic Games begin Friday

DAVID W. HARRIS
Senior Staff Writer

For the first time in 12 years, West Coast athletes will compete in the Olympic Games. The Soviet Union will be the first to compete in the East Bloc teams to Seoul to the best the West has to offer. Four years ago in Los Angeles, the United States Olympic Team won 174 medals — 84 of them gold. When the games lit Friday night to officially begin the XXIV Olympiad, don't expect American athletes to duplicate the medal count. Competition will be higher this year than it was in the 1984 Olympics. However, America has one of its strongest teams

Steve Lewis is expected to match his record of four gold medals in the 100 meters, 200 meters, long jump and part of the 4x100 relay team. Only real competition will be his own teammates Calvin Simms, Joe DeLoach, Roy Martin and Myrick. Canadian, Ben Johnson has the best chance of beating Lewis in the 100-meters, but don't count on it.

For his third Olympics, 33-year-old hurdler Edwin Moses should have an American sweep of the 400-meter hurdles. Moses, who is in the best of his career, says he feels this is the year for him to break his world record of 47.02 seconds. The team of Butch Reynolds, Steve Everett, Steve Lewis and Robinzine should bring home gold in the 4x400 relay, with the Germans and Soviets hot on the heels. Reynolds should also win a gold in the 400 meters.

For American track and field athletes who should win medals are Randy Barnes (shot put), pole vaulter Kory Tarpenning, Roger Kingdom (110 hurdles) and Johnny Gray (800 meters).

Jackie Joyner-Kersey leads a strong women's track team to Seoul. Perhaps the greatest female athlete ever, Joyner-Kersey should win a gold in the heptathlon. Joyner-Kersey is the only woman to score 7,000 points in a competition, and has done it four times. Expect her to do it again, with a possible world record performance.

Florence Griffith-Joyner should have little problem winning both the 100- and 200-meters. Only East Germany's Heike Drechsler should give her any challenge.

The 4x100 team of Griffith-Joyner, Evelyn Ashford, Gwen Torrence and Sheila Echols should take the gold medal, but the 4x400 team of Diane Dixon, Denean Howard, Valerie Brisco, Lillie Leatherwood will probably not be able to beat the East Germans.

Mary Decker Slaney should win medals in the 1,500 and 3,000 meters. She should strike gold in the 1,500 and could pull it off in the 3,000 as well. Other chances for medals include Ashford (100-meters) and Joyner-Kersey (long jump).

Concentrating on defense and the transition game, Georgetown University basketball coach John Thompson has attempted to create a true team for the U.S. Basketball Team, not a group of outstanding individuals. Danny Manning and David Robinson lead this year's squad that is expected to take the gold.

The Soviets and the Brazilians should provide the best competition for the young American team. But if experience plays a major role, Thompson is a proven winner and will motivate his young team to victory.

The American women should also bring home a basketball gold. The U.S. women have never beaten the Soviets in Olympic competition, but look for that to change. Teresa Edwards, Kamie Ethridge and Anne Donovan lead a team ready to duplicate 1986's Goodwill Games thrashing of the Soviets. And they have only gotten better.

There are 93 medals to be won in the Olympic pool this year, and America has a good chance of landing several. Tom Jager and Matt Biondi should dominate the freestyle sprints and play important roles in the 4x100 relay.

Biondi will also compete in, and probably win, the 200-meter butterfly, the 4x100 and 4x200 medley relays.

Gold medals should also be won by David Berkoff in the 200-meter backstroke, and David Wharton in the 200-meter individual medley.

Other potential medal winners are Chris Jacobs, BYU's Troy Dabley, Matt Cetlinski, Rich Schroeder, Mike Barrowman, Jay Mortenson, Melvin Stewart and Doug Gjertsen.

The women swimmers will face stiff competition from East Germany, but should still amass a sizable medal count.

Angel Meyers is America's best swimmer, but will have to swim hard to beat China's Yang Wen-yi and Romania's Tamara Costache in the 50-meter freestyle. 17-year-old Janet Evans should win all three of her events (400 and 800-meter freestyle and 400-meter individual medley).

Boxers Michael Carbajal, Arthur Johnson, Kelcie Banks, Todd Foster, Kenny Gould, Anthony Hembrick, Andrew Maynard, Ray Mercer and Riddick Bowe all have shots at medals, with Foster possibly taking the gold.

Greg Louganis is the favorite once again to win the gold in the three-meter springboard and the 10-meter platform dive. Women divers Kelly McCormick and Michelle Mitchell are picked to win the silver in their events.

History of modern Olympics has roots in ancient Greece

ANDY WILLIAMS
Staff Editor

At its early beginnings in ancient Greece, the Olympic Games have continued to the present day to become the most important dream of athletes world-

The first 292 or so games were held in Olympia, Greece, every four years around 776 B.C. until 393 A.D., when they were banned by Emperor Theodosius because they had become associated with instances of bribery and corruption.

Initially consisting of only one event, the Greek games were expanded over the years to include wrestling, boxing and wrestling. The games also increased through the centuries from a simple olive wreath to the gifts and money.

In the late 1800s, Baron Pierre de Coubertin of France conceived the idea of the modern Olympic Games. He was inspired by the success of the ancient Greek Games, and Coubertin spent years drumming up support for the games from neighboring countries. His interest in the Games was inspired in Greece, the first modern Olympic Games were held in Athens.

1896 — Athens, Greece
Inspired by a gift from a wealthy architect, the Athens Games were considered a huge success. Although the quality of athletic competition was considered poor, the enthusiasm of the spectators made up for it, and was rewarded when a Greek peasant, Spiridon Louis, won the marathon.

1900-1900 — Paris, France
The success of the Athens Games and the Paris Games were a disaster. Included as a small part of the Paris World Exhibition and running for over five months, the games were poorly organized and extended.

1904 — St. Louis, U.S.A.
Originally scheduled for Chicago, the location of the games was changed so they could be included as part of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition when they were part of the expo, the St. Louis Games were a failure which most European athletes did not even bother attending. Again, poor organization and a schedule which distributed the games over 4½ months led to near disaster for the games.

1908 — London, England
The London Games were well-organized and attended by many countries. Unfortunately, intense bickering and disputes between the nations, especially between Great Britain and the United States, almost brought the Olympics to a halt once again.

1912 — Stockholm, Sweden
Finally in 1912, the Stockholm Games were considered a success. Well-organized and smoothly run, the only hitch occurred when Sweden would not allow boxing matches to be held in their country. The 1912 games saw the introduction of electronic timing devices for events and use of a public address system.

During the Stockholm Games, American athlete Jim Thorpe won gold medals in both the decathlon and pentathlon, only to have his name stricken from the records after it was found that he had earned $25 a week playing minor league baseball at one time, thus making him a professional athlete. The International Olympic Committee (I.O.C.) finally lifted the ban on Thorpe in 1983, returned his name to the records and presented his gold medals to his children.

Another athlete, later to be known as General George S. Patton, took 5th place in the pentathlon, losing a chance at a medal because of his poor marksmanship.

1920 — Antwerp, Belgium
After World War I, which interrupted the Olympics in 1916, the 1920 games were awarded to Belgium as compensation for grief inflicted upon the country during the war. The losers of the war (Austria, Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary and Turkey) were not allowed to participate. With little money left to produce the Olympics, the resulting games were far from impressive.

Paavo Nurmi, "The Flying Finn," began his eight-year domination of middle distance events at the 1920 Olympics, winning a gold medal in the 10,000-meter race.

1924 — Paris, France
Competition at the Paris Games was of high standard, but Parisian See HISTORY on page 13

After nine years of exhaustive training sessions, endless meets, emotional ups and downs and plain hard work, Jeanine Marlowe, mother of Olympic gymnast Melissa Marlowe, is convinced that the hard part is now over.

The life of a world-class athlete is not easy and it's no picnic for her mother either, according to Marlowe. Her life has changed drastically since Melissa began training, she said. Plans for breaks and family vacations were constantly being interrupted by unexpected meets. She said it got so bad, she had to finally stop planning completely.

The economics of raising an Olympian is also a burden, she said. "The hardest time is while you're trying to get on a team, trying to make a name for yourself," Marlowe said. The cost of traveling from meet to meet, plus the price of training makes the expense brutal. "I feel sorry for parents who are in that situation now," she said.

Melissa began training in gymnastics when she was 8 years old. "It was her idea," Marlowe said. "I would have wanted her to be a dancer." Even so, she supported her daughter's decision. She knew Melissa would do well but she said she never would have thought Melissa would end up in the Olympics.

The years of training have been an emotional struggle for both mother and daughter. "It's been a bitter-sweet experience," Marlowe said. "The last few years have been an emotional roller coaster."

Melissa suffered disappointments and failures along the way, her mother said. Often life was very emotionally strenuous. "Sometimes you just feel helpless," Marlowe said. "You learn to find people you can trust to rely on."

The person she found to rely on was Keith Henschen, a sports psychologist at the University of Utah. "He was miraculous," she said. "I think he saved us both."

Although there were struggles, some valuable lessons were learned also. Marlowe said there was a time, while Melissa was still quite young, when she wanted to quit training.

"Gymnastics came very easy to Missy," Marlowe said. "But about a year after she began it became more difficult, and she wanted to give it up."

It was then Melissa had to learn that if something was important to her, she would have to work for it. "Since then, she has never wanted to quit again," she said.

Melissa is now 17 years old and a senior in high school. "Her friends have been very understanding," Marlowe said. "Even though she was often busy, they always made sure she was involved or invited."

She said Melissa has been able to maintain many of her childhood friends. Part of the reason Melissa has been able to keep her friends is that her parents insisted that she spend time on things other than gymnastics.

Another reason she has maintained friendships is that she is one of only three girls on the gymnastic team who have chosen to continue their studies.

Being in school allows her to maintain social contacts. Melissa took independent study courses over the summer so she wouldn't fall behind her classmates while she was in Korea.

Marlowe hopes to catch up to her daughter in Seoul on Wednesday. She will be traveling with Melissa's grandmother, aunt and uncle. Marlowe said she is unsure of what to expect when she arrives. She would like to have contact with Melissa but is assuming there will not be any.

Marlowe said that even though they were always busy they didn't fail to have fun. But even so, now that the Olympics are only a few days away, Marlowe said she is very relieved.

Prisoner runs race for DUI crash survivor

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A man who killed six people on Mother's Day two years ago when his speeding vehicle ran off a cliff ran a solitary race within prison walls to benefit the surviving victim.

Steve Rodriguez also ran the five kilometer memorial race to remind others of the harm drinking and driving can cause. The lone surviving victim of the accident was Brandy Hill, now seven years old. Her mother and siblings all died in the accident.

On the night of the mishap, Rodriguez had learned he would likely lose custody of his children in a divorce case recently had been laid off from his job. He went to the drinking alley and had a few beers to forget his problems.

His vehicle was airborne when it came down and slammed into the Morrill automobile. Brandy and her family were on their way to deliver a Mother's Day gift to their grandmother, Nancy Clegg, in West Jordan.

Without knowing what to say, Rodriguez called Clegg to apologize. To his surprise, she responded with compassion. When he offered her his first prison paycheck of $5 from doing chores, he thought she would be offended, but she accepted.

Now, he splits his weekly paycheck four equal ways between his three children, who live in California, and Brandy.

When Rodriguez has finished his prison time, he plans to travel the state, lecturing to high school students about the stupidity of handling depression and anger through alcohol.

Minnesota girl wins Miss America title, plans to become a corporate executive

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Newly crowned Miss America Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson, a classical violinist and Stanford University student with hopes of law school, said Sunday she plans to become a corporate executive.

"I'm definitely an overachiever," she told reporters.

"This wasn't luck," said Miss Carlson, entered in the pageant as Miss Minnesota, said of her selection as Miss America 1989. She added that she is not superstitious and brought no good-luck charms to the pageant.

Pageant officials took pains this year to emphasize that the judges were looking for "an articulate, educated, dynamic role model" and not a beauty queen.

BYU dancers will perform in Seoul

Editor's note: The following story was originally printed in the August 15, 1988 issue of The Daily Universe.

When the American Folk Dance Ensemble from BYU dances in the opening ceremonies of the Summer Olympics in Korea, they will already have performed in Hong Kong and four Asian countries in five weeks.

The ensemble started its trip Aug. 12 in the Philippines and then traveled to Hong Kong, followed by China and Taiwan, where they picked up a bluegrass band which will perform with them in Korea.

Since Sept. 10, the group has been participating in the "1988 Seoul International Folklore Festival."

For a week prior to the Olympics, the group will tour three Korean cities with three other dance groups from Poland, Turkey and Senegal, culminating with the performance in the opening ceremonies of the Olympics.

While the group is in Uijongbu, Korea, the torch carrying the Olympic flame will stay there for the night on its trek to Seoul.

The 12 groups participating in the festival were invited by the Korean contingent of Council of International Folklore Festivals (CIOFF). The groups were then asked to participate in the opening ceremonies of the Summer Olympics.

"The ensemble is the only one from North America, including Canada," said Rex Barrington, tour manager and assistant director of BYU Performance Scheduling. "There is a group from Peru. We and the group from Peru are the only two groups from the Western Hemisphere that will be there," he said.

Dean L. Larsen, a member of the First Presidency of the First Quorum of the Seventy is traveling with the group, representing the BYU Board of Trustees.

Mary Bee Jensen, the former artistic director and founder of the folk dance program at BYU and the U.S. representative in CIOFF, helped with getting the invitation to the festival.

Ed Austin and Delynn Peay are the two artistic directors who will share the responsibilities of directing and producing the show while on the trip. Peay will be with the group the first half of the tour and Austin will be the director the second half.

The group will be performing three sections of dance. The first will be a section with an American Appalachian Mountain dance, big circle mountain dance and clogging.

They will also perform a suite of dances that were done while the pioneers crossed the plains. Some of these are the contra dance, polka quadrille, round dance and a medley of pioneer folk dances.

The third will be a suite of Western United States dances that portray the American cowboy and the West.

They will also perform a varsoviana (similar to the mazurka, a Polish dance) and Western square dance. All three sections will include folk music.

"The dancers have been preparing all year," said Austin. "To be on the team and to go on this trip, many of them have had to make a lot of sacrifices."

Scott Mahoney, a junior from Richmond, Calif. majoring in design engineering technology has been on the touring dance group for four years.

"Each year the sacrifice has gotten bigger, financially and scholastically, but it is worth it," said Mahoney.

"When we participate in international festivals, we live with groups from other countries.

"There is a common bond and that is dance, and you become good friends even if you don't speak the same language," he said.

"It's also worth it when you see the happiness you bring to people and can communicate with them through your performances."

BYU alumni travel to Korea to compete in the Olympics

Editor's note: The following story was originally printed in the August 5, 1988, issue of The Daily Universe.

by STACEY JAMES
Universe Sports Writer

Many current and former BYU athletes are on their way to compete in the Summer Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea.

Ed Eyestone

Eyestone, a former long-distance runner at BYU, had only participated in two marathons before this past April's Olympic trials.

In the trials he placed second, in 2:12:48, gaining a spot on the U.S. Olympic Team. He will be one of three Americans to compete in the Olympic marathon.

Eyestone is an eight-time All-American in indoor and outdoor track. He was a member of the U.S. Olympic Team in 1984 and is a three-time member of the U.S. Cross Country Team for the World Championships.

He clocked 27:41.1 at Mt. SAC Relay in April of 1985, setting a world record.

Henry Marsh

Marsh will be competing in the triple jump event of the upcoming Olympics. He set the U.S. triple jump record in 1977, 1980, 1983 and still holds the U.S. mark here in 1985.

He has been among the world's top triple jumpers every year for the last 12 years. He was rated No. 1 in the world in 1981-82 and 1985.

Marsh has been a member of three Olympic teams previous to this year's team.

"My first Olympic games, it was the first I was in awe," he said. "My second we boycotted and my third was in the U.S. in our hometown. I'm excited to go now but I'm at the tail end of my career — this is my last one. I've never been to Korea and so it makes it exciting."

In addition to participating in the Olympics as an athlete, Marsh is also a member of the Olympic Board. He is president of the athletics advisory council and a member of the executive board and administration committee.

He said he is training really hard in preparation for the games. "I'm starting to visualize. I'm starting to focus in the games."

Marsh is currently the Director of Corporate Wellness at Franklin Institute in Salt Lake City and is also the father of four.

Doug Padilla

Padilla was the only American to reach the finals of the 1984 Olympics in the 5,000-meter relay. He also won the 1,000-meter relay in the Goodwill Games in Moscow in 1986.

Doug Padilla, a former BYU student, will be competing in the Summer Olympic Games.

1986. He holds three American records: The indoor two mile, the indoor 5,000 and the outdoor 3,000.

This will be Padilla's second time going to the Olympics. He said his goal is to have the best performance he can. "It's exciting. It's a goal that every athlete has," he said.

Padilla said the hardest thing about training for the Olympics is getting to bed on time. "It's difficult to stop everything you're working on and go to bed."

Padilla, who is a father of two, has worked with the Boy Scouts in his Orem ward since 1986 and is frequently asked to speak at firesides.

Mike Schlappi

Schlappi will be participating in the Olympics on the wheelchair basketball team. He and 29 others were chosen to try out for the Olympics. After three practices per day for three days, 12 players were selected for the Olympic team and Schlappi was one of them.

He said he considers it an honor to have the chance to participate in the Olympics. "I contain my emotions pretty easily but inside I'm really excited about it," he said.

Here at BYU, many seem to be very proud of these formal BYU athletes.

BYU's track coach, Sherald James, coached Eyestone, Marsh and Padilla during their time at BYU and is currently training them for the Olympics.

He said, "Going to the Olympics is one of the highlights for an individual. Not only for an athlete, but for a coach too. It's kind of the ultimate."

James said he thinks these athletes that will be participating in the Olympics have already helped to inspire young upcoming athletes to shoot for the same type of experience.

"I think they've helped them in realizing there's a place for everyone. There's not a place for losers. God created a place for everyone within their own sphere," he said. "That doesn't mean there aren't any pitfalls. These athletes have had their share, but haven't let it destroy them."

David Schulthess, director of BYU's sports information, said, "Since the Olympics is worldwide in its range, you know that you're looking at the world's finest in this competition. Whenever we're able to watch our formal athletes in this competition, I don't think there can be a greater thrill."

"All of us at BYU are tremendously proud and honored that some of the old Cougar crowd will be reaching for the Olympic gold this summer," said BYU President Jeffrey R. Holland. "It's an exciting time for them and for us. Our pride and best wishes for success go with them."

Fame and fortune can be short-lived for veterans of the U.S. Olympic Team

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — It didn't take gymnast Scott Johnson long to realize the seasonal and fleeting nature of Olympic glory.

A member of the 1984 gold medal-winning American team in Los Angeles and now the veteran of the 1988 squad, Johnson recounted Sunday how he went from the champions' podium to the grill of a fast-food restaurant and back to the Olympic rings in Seoul.

"We went on tour right after the Olympics and we all had a trust fund set up for us," he said. "Things were great for a while, but then the fame and glory faded away and the money began to run out."

Unlike most of the other members of the 1984 U.S. team, Johnson did not retire. But with a wife to support and $500 house payments, he found it virtually impossible to balance his check book and training schedule.

"The fame and glory faded away, and for about nine or 10 months I was literally scraping the ground just to try to go on living," Johnson said. After a brief stint as a shoe salesman, Johnson went to work as a manager's trainee at McDonald's, now a major sponsor of the U.S. Olympic program.

"It's tough to work six hours a day behind the counter and then go out and train for four more," he said.

That is one reason Johnson and other American athletes advocate a system where all amateur athletes would receive money while continuing to train. Johnson would not endorse the practice of giving large sums of money to athletes who win Olympic medals — as much as $15,000 for a gold — but he said some type of compensation is needed.

"There's a lot of patriotism around Olympic time, but when it comes to money, there isn't much," Johnson said.

DIAMONDS:

Everything you wanted to know but didn't know whom to ask.

You're looking for a diamond but don't know where to start? Here are some guidelines on how to get the best diamond for your money.

- First, see a reliable jeweler. We can explain the difference in various diamonds and how these differences affect the price, like no other jeweler. You see, we think you should know exactly what you are buying, especially when it's something as important as a diamond. Just ask a friend about the Wilson Diamond impeccable reputation.
- Buy the best diamond you can afford. Most jewelers cannot even offer you the best diamond man has been able to produce: A Lazare Kaplan Diamond. These diamonds are cut to superior specifications for unmatched brilliance and fire. The difference in beauty really shows. Buy a diamond you can be proud of.
- Look for a store that stands behind their diamonds. We guarantee our diamonds. We replace any diamond that falls out of your ring for life, free. We guarantee your ring for life. We give lifetime services such as cleaning, checking prongs and refinishing your ring free. We guarantee you can trade your diamond for another at any time with no loss to you. We even guarantee the price on any diamond or ring we sell!
- Find a jeweler who specializes in diamonds. At Wilson Diamonds you won't talk to a former shoe salesman. You will talk to an extensively trained diamond jeweler, who is professionally certified. You will also find the largest selection of wedding sets to choose from. That's because we specialize in diamond engagement rings.
- Find a store that won't be pushy. Pushiness by salespeople only means they need to force you to make a hasty decision or they probably won't see you again. At Wilson's we feel comfortable about letting you take your time. With all we have to offer, we don't need to pressure you into the right decision.
- Lastly, find the impossible combination: A jeweler that will give all the above advantages and still guarantee their prices! Impossible? Not at Wilson Diamonds. Save yourself some time and money. Come see us.

We please everyone but our competitors.

New features in the BYU Student Medical Plan for the 1988-89 year are maternity coverage, increased emergency coverage, a monthly payment plan and substantially higher premiums.

To meet federal anti-discriminatory regulations, BYU included prenatal and delivery care in the student health plan, said Ryan L. Thomas, assistant dean of Student Life. Thomas is responsible for designing the health plan.

This year the plan gives complete maternity coverage. Last year's plan covered hospitalization and physician's charge at a 10 percent discount. At the time the cost for delivery and a 12-hour stay at the Mountain View Hospital was $750.

Also added to the plan is a $300 increase of the annual maximum benefit allowed per person for non-surgical services. This brings the total amount to $500.

The services include medical or accidental emergency care, treatment within 90 days of the accident and diagnostic X-ray and lab services.

"This is the maximum amount available for the student after the $25 co-payment," said Bruce Woolley, managing director of Health Services.

A monthly payment plan begins this year, with rates of $31 for single students, $62 for students with one dependent and $93 for students with two dependents.

The insurance plan goes into effect with the first payment at the beginning of the month, and would be subject to termination in the case of payment default.

The new benefits do not come without a price. The premium increase for two semesters during the 1988-89 the 1988-89 plan caused considerable premium increases. A full 67 percent price increase for one year's medical insurance was required of the single student.

A student with one dependent paid 42 percent and with two dependents 28 percent more this year for one year's coverage. The average increase for annual rates in the 1988-89 year was 46 percent.

According to Thomas, the reason for the absence of annual premiums in the coming year's plan was that it was logistically difficult.

"The annual premium was not utilized by enough students to make up for the problems related to refunding students who changed their plans," said Thomas.

The allocation of cost, or the relative share of the total cost of the insurance, shifted the burden from students with dependents onto the single students.

Last year, students with dependents paid an average of $130 in addition to the cost of two or three single student plans combined. This year, a three percent relative increase in cost was added instead to the single student premium.

Increased premiums result from higher costs of health care delivery and inflation in medical care. The reason for the shift in cost onto the single student was an attempt to allocate the cost of risk to where it occurred, said Thomas.

He pointed out that married students also sign up for the single student plan.

"BYU can keep the cost of its medical health plan relatively low by managing the health care here. The Health Center clinics offer most medical specialties. Care not provided at BYU is provided in the community, with a referral from the Health Center," said Thomas.

year was an average of 26 percent. Single students paid the largest increase in cost at 42 percent. Students with one dependent paid 25 percent while students with two dependents paid 12 percent more.

"There has been an approximate 15 to 25 percent national increase in premium plan rates in the past year," said Scott Thornton, chief actuary for Deseret Mutual, which issues the BYU Insurance plan. The BYU rate increase is only slightly above the national average.

Unlike last year's plan, the 1988-89 plan does not provide discount rates, which saved an average of $76 for students staying the entire year.

"The Almighty Has His Own Purposes':
God and the American Writer"

At the end of the twentieth century the most vital American writers seem to speak of God—"the Everlasting"—in tones mournful, plaintive, even bitter, yet clearly aspiring. The religious situation for unaffiliated and "unchurched" writers—which many indeed are—can be a troubling one. A century whose greatest wonders for all to see are plainly science and technology, a society so wrapped up in material advancement that the spirit must often be looked for in the loneliest rather than the highest places—these give an understandable urgency to the sense of tragedy and loss with which many sensitive writers speak of God. . . . My principal concern will be with two great writers of the nineteenth century—one, the greatest "failure" though most brilliant imagination in America of the period, Herman Melville. . . . The second great writer is Abraham Lincoln, whose Second Inaugural Address (1865) is not only the greatest political document of its kind, but a transcendent religious meditation. . . .

Selected readings are available in the Reserve Library under Kazin/Forum.

Question and Answer Session at 12 noon in the Varsity Theater

Special arrangements were made for Professor Kazin to come the week of the Third National Willa Cather Symposium (September 14-17). There will be lectures, sessions of concurrent papers and special events including a reception announcing the opening of a photographic exhibit, a recital of musical works prominent in Cather's fiction, and a poetry reading of early Cather poems.

Spikers finish second in own Challenge Cup

Final Four entrant Texas takes first place after downing the Cougars in three games

By SHARI LYNN COX
Universe Sports Writer

The Women's volleyball team took second place this weekend in BYU's first Regional Challenge Cup Tournament, finishing with a record of 2-1.

The Cougars got off to a slow start Friday with a loss to Texas, but finished off Saturday with a 15-4, 15-7, 15-6 win over Pittsburgh and a 15-11, 15-8, 15-12 victory over Pacific.

The Texas Longhorns were the overall tournament champions with three straight wins. Pacific finished third, losing to BYU and Texas and Pittsburgh finished fourth.

"Texas was playing in mid-season form," said Coach Elaine Michaelis. Of all four teams Texas was the only team with a returning setter, increasing their edge over all the others.

"Jill Plumb and Dylann Duncan are both developing leadership on the court," said Michaelis. "Jill is leading with her enthusiasm and ability to take charge and Dylann with her playing ability."

Michaelis said that by the second match BYU was playing like the team she sees in practice. They were playing a more controlled game, with confidence and showed the crowd what the team is really like.

Defensive specialist Cherie Sam Fong set for BYU, taking the place of Daphne Gee. Gee, coming off a leg injury, has been practicing with the team and is expected to return to the BYU lineup next week.

"I was a little nervous to begin with," said Sam Fong. "But I'd been practicing with the team all week and we are beginning to work well together." Coach Michaelis said that by the third match they had started Sam Fong with quick sets to Duncan. A quick set is a low fast set.

The spikers finished off the tournament Saturday night with the win over Pacific.

The two teams, who tied for fifth nationally last year, were battling for second place.

BYU held the Tigers to a .102 team hitting percentage while leading with a percentage of .212. Duncan had 21 kills and a .341 hitting percentage and Plumb had nine kills and a .368 percentage.

Michaelis said the team controlled the match, with only a small lapse in concentration in the third game allowing the Tigers to pull ahead for a short time.

But Michaelis said the team as a whole played well together.

The Pacific Tigers were without the help of two-time All-American Elaina Oden, who did not travel with the team to Provo. Oden, who had knee surgery last November, was to have been a key returner in the Tiger lineup.

In the match against Pittsburgh Saturday afternoon the BYU offense dominated. Duncan led the team with 12 kills and six service aces. Marinda Gorbahn had nine kills and Plumb had eight. Tea Nieminen had two services aces.

Leading the defense in digs were

Jan Giles with 11 and Sam Fong with 10. The Cougars succeeded in holding the Panthers to a team hitting percentage of .024.

The Cougars only loss in the tournament came Friday night to the Texas Longhorns. In the match, which lasted just over an hour, BYU lost 15-11, 15-8, 15-12.

Duncan and Plumb led the team with 15 and 12 kills, respectively. Although a rally in the third game gave the Cougars a lead, they were unable to hang on to the win.

Texas held BYU to a team hitting percentage of .062, while it hit .218.

Six outstanding players were chosen from all of the teams to make up an all-tournament team. The players chosen from the Longhorn team were Dawn Davenport, Dagmara Szysczak and Quandalyne Harrell. Cathey Scotlan was chosen from Pacific.

From BYU two players, Jill Plumb and Dylann Duncan, were chosen for the team. And the Most Valuable Player of the tournament was Sue Schelfhout of Texas.

According to Michaelis, the tournament accomplished what she had wanted it to. "A 2-1 record for the tournament was what we needed to raise our confidence level and to establish us at the level we want to be at," she said.

The team has had trouble in the past playing two tough games in a row, she said.

"Being able to come back after two tough games and play again is good," said Michaelis.

Next weekend the Cougars will be hosting another tournament, the Beehive Classic, which will feature teams from all over Utah. Utah State, the University of Utah, Weber State and Southern Utah State will all be attending.

Volleyball team makes cuts

LAURIE PATTERSON
Universe Sports Writer

Volleyballs became intense as 80 players competed for 25 spots on the men's blue and white volleyball teams Sept. 11.

"We cut over 30 guys the first day," said assistant coach Rod Cortez. "They are hard decisions to make, you have to decide which players have what we need and who will be the better player in the long run," said Cortez.

Returning for the Cougar white team as outside hitters are Mark Tuttle, senior, from Placerville, Calif., John Smith, junior, from Santa Barbara, Calif. and Chris Smith, freshman, from Livermore, Calif. Returning as middle blockers are Jim Sorenson, senior, from Salt Lake City, and Russ Burningham, freshman, from Chula Vista, Calif.

Smith and Burningham were absent for two years playing missions for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Head Coach Tom Peterson said, "This will be a rebuilding year with only five players returning, but it's exciting because new players are more intense and yearn to play."

The new roster for the white team will include: Brent Smith, senior, from Fresno, Calif. and David Johnston,

Also battling it out to the end for the final setter position are Rod Cortez, sophomore, from Livermore, California and Benny Millar, sophomore, from Medford, Oregon. Coach Peterson said he will announce the final decision early next week who will play on the white team and who will move to the blue team.

Sorenson, who returned from an internship in Washington, D.C. last year said, "Even though it's going to be a rebuilding year, I see the potential for a really good season."

The Cougars have a tradition of winning, but because they are not NCAA affiliated they are not nationally ranked.

In 1986 the team remained undefeated and lost only to Manitoba after losing players to injuries.

In the past, the Cougars have played top nationally ranked teams like UCLA, USC, Pepperdine, San Diego State, Long Beach State, Ball State (Indiana), George Mason (Virginia) and Manitoba (Calgary).

Graf takes Grand Slam

Wilander wins marathon final

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mats Wilander ended Ivan Lendl's three-year reign as U.S. Open champion and took over his No. 1 ranking with a dramatic five-set victory Sunday in the longest final in Open history.

On Saturday, West Germany's Steffi Graf became the first player since Margaret Court in 1970 to win the Grand Slam with a three-set victory over Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini.

The 24-year-old Wilander, who won the 1988 Australian and French Opens, became the first man since Jimmy Connors in 1974 to win three Grand Slam events in one year by beating Lendl 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, in 4 hours and 54 minutes.

The 62-minute first set was typical of the match, featuring long baseline rallies that sometimes lasted more than 20 strokes.

Lendl saved a break point in the eighth game when Wilander netted an easy forehand volley and held serve to make it 4-4.

But Wilander broke in the 10th game to win the set when Lendl made two straight backhand errors. Lendl had saved a set point earlier in the game when Wilander hit a backhand inches wide.

Wilander broke Lendl in the second game of the second set on a lunging stab volley and moved out to a 4-1 lead. But Lendl regained his form and won the next five games to even the match.

There was only one break in the 46-minute third set, and it belonged to Wilander. He broke Lendl at 15 in the second game on a crisp forehand volley.

Wilander, not known as a powerful server, lost only four points on his serve the rest of the set.

The players held serve in the fourth set until Wilander broke to take a 4-3 lead. Lendl led the game 30-0, but Wilander came back to win it as Lendl made three unforced errors.

Lendl broke back with a perfect backhand lob in the next game and broke again in the final game with a forehand volley that landed on the line.

At set point, someone in the stands threw two balls on the court that bounced just in front of Wilander as he was about to toss up a second serve. Because of the distraction, Snyder gave Wilander two serves. After returning a second serve, Lendl rushed the net and hit the winning volley. Wilander took the final set on serve but only after Lendl saved two match points.

Graf took the women's final by a 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 score. "I'm glad to have the talk over about the Grand Slam," Graf said. "It's a nice relief to not have any pressure on me. No one else will have to tell me I have to do it here."

Graf, 19, became the first player to sweep the Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. championships in the same year since Court did it 18 years ago.

"I'm very thrilled. It's a very happy feeling at this moment," said Graf, who ran over to the stands to hug her parents and her coach, Pavel Slozil, after the 1-hour, 42-minute match.

"Everybody had been telling me how tough the last tournament would be. I wasn't nervous, but I was tight."

"There were a lot of expectations. People were saying, 'She'll do it unless she breaks her leg.' I kept hearing those comments all the time and it was a hard thing to get through."

Graf is the second youngest player to win the Grand Slam. Maureen Connolly was 18 when she won the four major titles in 1953. The only other Slam winners were Don Budge in 1938 and Rod Laver in 1962 and 1969. Budge, 73, attended Saturday's match and kissed Graf during the awards ceremony.

"He said, 'I knew you would do it' and that I will do it a few more times," said Graf, who has played in seven straight Grand Slam finals.

Sabatini, 18, had handed the top seed her only two defeats this year in 61 matches. But the first Argentine woman to play in a Grand Slam final couldn't stop Graf from winning her 34th straight match and her ninth tournament of the year.

Men's soccer team destroys Colorado squad

By VICKI WILSON
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's soccer team demolished Colorado Baptist 12-0 Friday night at Haws Field and improved its record to 3-1.

The first goal came from Corey Sherman, freshman defender from St. Valrico, Fla. He received a long throw in from Brett Nelson, freshman defender from Dallas, and headed the ball in for the score.

The next score also came from a headed in ball. John Allred, freshman forward from Bountiful, crossed the ball across the mouth of the goal. Mark Wehlan, sophomore midfielder from Milwaukee, received the ball and shot but it bounced off the side pole into the air. Warren Rapp, defender from Reno, Nev., rushed at the ball to head it in for the score.

The third score came minutes before the end of the first half whistle and was also scored from a header. Wehlan crossed a corner kick to the front of the goal and Nelson headed the ball over the goalie's head.

The Cougars outshot Colorado in the first half 22-9. Colorado attacked only a few times and spent most of the half on their side of the field.

The second half was more of the same as the Cougars scored nine more goals and prevented Colorado from scoring any.

Coach Woolley said of the game, "It certainly was a home crowd pleaser. Our fans are beginning to see how dangerous we can be whenever the ball enters our opponents penalty box."

Colorado coach Harry Temmer had anticipated a tough BYU team but the game proved to be more than he expected. "I always knew that BYU had the potential to be a good soccer team, but I never expected to come up against a team as highly disciplined. BYU executes their offense very quickly and with a lot of success."

The Cougar's next game is Tuesday night against an Olympic Development Team at 7:30 p.m. at Haws Field.

San Francisco edges Giants 20-17

By DAVID W. HARRIS
The Associated Press

San Francisco's Joe Montana showed the New York Giants why he is the 49ers' number one quarterback Sunday when he came off the bench to lead Jerry Rice with 78-yard touchdown pass with only 42 seconds remaining as the 49ers beat the Giants 20-17.

Montana, who was one of several quarterbacks to be injured last week, relieved Steve Young to rally the 49ers to their second win in as many games.

The scoring pass came only 39 seconds after Giants' quarterback Phil Simms hit Lionel Manuel with a scoring pass to give New York a 17-13 lead. The score was set up by a 32-yard Phil McConkie punt return and appeared to give the Giants the victory.

Young, who started the game at quarterback, led the 49ers offense in the first half, but managed only a 10-yard gain by the end of the first half.

Roger Craig led all rushers with 110 yards and caught nine passes for 62 yards in the victory.

In other games:

Chicago 17, Indianapolis 13

For the second week in a row, Eric Dickerson fumbled away the Colts' chances for a victory. Dickerson lost the ball with less than six minutes remaining and Steve McMichael recovered to allow the Bears to run out the clock.

New Orleans 29, Atlanta 21

Atlanta quarterback Chris Miller gave the surprise performance of the day and gave the underdog Falcons an early lead with two touchdowns passes in the first half. But the Saints came back to end the half with a scoring pass from Bobby Hebert to Eric Martin.

Dalton Hilliard, who ran for 97 yards on the day, scored on a four-yard run with 8:52 remaining to clinch the victory for the Saints. Morten Anderson kicked three field goals for the Saints to provide the margin of victory.

Washington 30, Pittsburgh 29

Redskins' rookie kicker Chip Lohmiller looked like a seasoned veteran as he drilled a 19-yard field goal with 12 seconds left to give his team the victory. Four minutes earlier, Doug Williams hit Kelvin Bryant with a seven-yard touchdown pass to cut the Steelers lead to two. A botched extra-point attempt by the Steelers in the first half proved to be the difference in the game. Steeler quarterback Bobby Brister threw for two touchdowns and ran for another.

Elsewhere, the New York Jets downed Cleveland 23-3 in a game in which the Browns lost their second quarterback in as many weeks. Minnesota thrashed New England 36-6. Houston defeated the Los Angeles Raiders 38-35. Buffalo squeaked past Miami 9-6. The Los Angeles Rams beat Detroit 17-10. Seattle whipped Kansas City 31-10. Cincinnati came from behind to beat Philadelphia 28-24. It was Denver hammering San Diego 34-3 and Tampa Bay beating Green Bay 13-10.

HISTORY

Spectators put a damper on the games by booing during the national anthems of victorious athletes from various countries. 1924 also ushered in the first Winter Olympics, held in Chamonix, France.

1928 — Amsterdam
The 1928 games were a success, but were disrupted by protests during boxing tournaments. 1928 was the first year for track and field events to be included for women, along with the first women's events of tennis, golf, figure skating, yachting, swimming and fencing.

Paavo Nurmi duplicated his 1920 win in Amsterdam, winning the gold medal in the 10,000-meter race. American swimmers Johnny Weissmuller and Buster Crabbe brought home medals. Weissmuller with two gold and Crabbe with a bronze.

1932 — Los Angeles, U.S.A.
Participation in the Los Angeles games was low, but the level of competition was high. Automatic timing and the photo-finish camera were introduced during the 1932 Olympic games.

Alfred "Babe" Didrikson won gold medals for the hurdles and the 100-yard dash, while Buster Crabbe won a gold medal for swimming.

1936 — Berlin, Germany
Also known as the "Nazi Games," the 1936 Olympics are best remembered for Hitler's failed attempt to prove the superiority of the Aryan race. A theory which was disproved. American Jesse Owens captured four gold medals in track and field events.

The torch relay from Olympia to the site of the games was introduced during the 1936 games. Sohn Kee-chung, a Korean runner who won the 1936 marathon, is excluded from the 1936 marathon, is excluded from the torch during the closing ceremonies of the 1988 Summer Games.

1948 — London, England
After World War II had caused the 1940 and 1944 Olympics to be cancelled, there was little interest at first in London citizens to hold the 1948 games there. As after World War I, winners of the war (Japan and Germany) were not allowed to participate.

The London Olympics brought the participation from Communist countries, as well as the first defections of Communist athletes.

1952 — Helsinki, Finland
The Soviet Union participated for the first time during the Helsinki games, leading many to believe a Cold War showdown between the United States and the U.S.S.R. was inevitable. Actually, the two countries got along extremely well and were well behaved at all times. The 1952 games went so smoothly that many wished they could always be held in Scandinavia.

1956 — Melbourne, Australia
The Melbourne Games were the first Olympics ever held in the Southern Hemisphere. The remote location caused a double boycott by six countries and low participation. A combined effort during the closing ceremonies, where athletes of different countries gathered together instead of in separate ceremonies, was innovated during the Melbourne Games as a symbol of peace. Al Oerter, a 20-year-old from New York, won the gold in the discus, beginning a streak that would earn him a gold medal in the discus for four straight Olympics.

1960 — Rome, Italy
The 1960 Rome Games were the first in which South Africa was allowed to participate. They were boycotted thereafter by the I.O.C. as punishment to the South African government for its racist policies. Athletes like Al Oerter on discus, and Johnson in the decathlon and Rudolph in three different events helped increase the United States share of the gold during the games.

1964 — Tokyo, Japan
The Tokyo Olympics were one of the most smoothly run games in a long time, unmarred by incident.

1968 — Mexico City, Mexico
Keeping in tune with the turbulent late '60s, the Mexico City Games of 1968 had its share of controversies. Tommie Smith and John Carlos, American runners, staged a Black Power protest during the national anthem after winning the gold and bronze, respectively, in the 200-meter event. After holding aloft a black-gloved fist during the anthem, Smith and Carlos were denounced by the I.O.C., suspended by the U.S. Olympic Committee and ordered to leave Mexico within 48 hours.

1968 also brought about the introduction of sex tests for women athletes. By the standards of these tests, many of the earlier women athletes who won during the first few games would not have been allowed to participate. Another controversy of the 1968 games was the altitude of Mexico City (7347 feet), which led to world record times in short distance events, and disaster for endurance runners.

Famous athletes of the 1968 games include Richard Fosbury, the American high jumper whose gold-medal technique gave birth to the "Fosbury Flop"; Robert Beamon, who won a gold in the long jump and set a world record which has lasted twenty years; American swimmer Mark Spitz, who began his collection of medals with a bronze, a silver and two gold in both individual and relay swimming events; and Al Oerter, who, as usual, won a gold in the discus.

1972 — Munich, West Germany
The West German city was excited at the chance to erase the embarrassment of the 1936 Nazi Games, but the Munich Olympics were scarred by yet another incident, the Sept. 5, 1972, terrorist attack on the Israeli team. Palestinian terrorists sneaked into the Olympic Village, killing two Israelis outright and holding another nine hostage, demanding the release of 200 prisoners from Israeli prisons. In the end, after a shootout with West German sharpshooters, nine Israelis were dead, along with four terrorists. The Games were suspended for 34 hours and a memorial service was held in the main arena for the Israelis who had died. Afterwards, when the games resumed, many athletes had lost the desire to compete.

Still, many memorable performances came out of the Munich Games. Soviet gymnast Olga Korbut won the hearts of the world, winning gold in both the balance beam and the floor exercise, along with a silver in the uneven bars. Mark Spitz won an unprecedented seven gold medals in almost every swimming event available, becoming the first person to do so at a single Olympics.

1976 — Montreal, Canada
The Montreal Games brought excellent competition to the Olympics, but poor planning and corruption caused Montreal to suffer a major financial loss.

American Bruce Jenner won the gold and a spot on a Wheaties box for his world-record win of the decathlon. Boxing brothers Michael and Leon Spinks both won gold medals in their weight classes, and 14-year-old Romanian Nadia Comaneci won her first two gold medals and a bronze in gymnastics, becoming the first gymnast to ever receive perfect scores of ten.

1980 — Moscow, U.S.S.R.
The 1980 games were boycotted by the United States, Great Britain, Australia and others to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Many of the nations allowed the athletes to decide on their own whether to join the boycott or go, but U.S. athletes were forbidden to travel to the Soviet Union. Soviet spectators gave a bad impression of the host city by booing and heckling the Polish and East German athletes.

1984 — Los Angeles, U.S.A.
The U.S.S.R. staged a revenge boycott at the L.A. Olympics, one which few countries joined in. These were the first games to be staged without government financing since 1896. There were very good feelings between the athletes, and the games were considered quite successful.

Among the track and field athletes who competed were Americans Carl Lewis, who duplicated the Jesse Owens' 1936 feat by winning gold medals in four different track and field events; Al Joyner, who won a gold in the triple jump; and Evelyn Ashford, who won the gold in the 100-meter dash and the 4x100-meter relay.

1984 was also the year of the American gymnast. Mary Lou Retton won the gold in the all-around competition, the first U.S. woman to win not only a medal, but a gold one at that, in gymnastics history. Her teammate Julianne McNamara also won a gold in the uneven bars.

The U.S. men's gymnastic team won plenty of gold as well. With team members chalking up a gold, a silver and three bronze medals in individual performances, as well as Peter Vidmar's silver in the all-around competition, the U.S. team easily placed first in team competition, gaining the first gold medal for a U.S. men's gymnastics team.

Although littered with boycotts, corruption and tragedy, the Olympics have remained a symbol of friendship between the nations, a testimonial that competition between countries doesn't have to be fought on a battlefield.

It takes a lot of time to prepare the background music for the Olympics, both the Summer and Winter Games. This past year in February, ABC tried an experiment, on-site music composition.

"This is the first time custom music — on-site and on-demand — had ever been done," said Randy Thornton, co-owner of Non-stop Productions, the Salt Lake City-based music company ABC hired to compose the music for the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary, Canada.

Non-stop had previously done work for ABC, writing music for soap operas, commercials and composing the most recent theme for Monday Night Football.

ABC Sports knew the work of the company, said Thornton. "So they called us up and asked us if we wanted to go."

"It was a brand new concept," said Kurt Bestor of Provo, who, along with Sam Cardon, was a composer for Non-stop Productions at the Winter Olympics.

"Someone would bring in some footage of a skier at 3 p.m.," said Bestor, who has studied studio composition at BYU. "They would tell us that they needed the music by 6:30 p.m. and we would put it together. It would be ready by that time."

A deadline is sometimes the best inspiration, he said. "And when you see footage of 'Eddie the Eagle,' (the first ski jumper from England) there are always musical ideas that run through your mind."

Non-stop took a remote recording studio to Calgary with them in a truck. It contained a 48-track recording system with the capability to produce both synthesized and electronic music and "samplers."

"We brought samplers of real instruments to create the music and the sound that we were looking for," said Bestor. A lot of the music was synthesized, though.

According to Thornton, a BYU graduate in music, most of the compositions were for small segments, replays of the more exciting sections of the Olympics and the "Up Close and Personal" sections, which focused on specific athletes at the Games.

Non-stop composed for ABC Sports and not for the parts sponsored by the Olympic Committee, he said.

"We did write for a pre-Olympic television special, but not for the Opening Ceremony," he said.

"It was probably the most intense writing situation I have ever been in," said Bestor. "By the end, I think that we had composed three to 3½ hours of total music."

Both Thornton and Bestor said they expect ABC will call them to do other work. They are not doing anything for the Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, because ABC isn't covering them.

"I think we did well enough that they should ask us to do it again," said Bestor. "I hope they will ask us."

"My experience was very similar to that of the athletes," he said. "It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience that I might never have the opportunity to do again."

Non-stop Productions was created by Thornton and Bryan Hofheins, also a BYU graduate in pre-med, because they said they thought they saw a market for this kind of work.

"It has far surpassed any of our expectations," said Thornton.

The company uses mostly local, free-lance musicians for their recordings and will do as many as 38 projects each month for advertising agencies, commercials and previews of shows.
